- View response For me, the most useful aspect of being a part of WEC hasn't so much been distinct projects we have worked on, but having a network of peers and mentors to learn from in formal and informal ways. In-person meetings have been most helpful for me in that regard. Having those meetings attached to WAEA has been helpful for me in streamlining my hectic travel schedule.
- View response Retiring this year so will not attend the meetings. However, I have appreciated the opportunity to attend, learn from and interact with colleagues over the years. Thanks so much! One topic of concern: the shrinking numbers of agricultural economics FTEs in Cooperative Extensions in Western US -- and the lack of re-hires. If the WEC could somehow work collaboratively on this, communicating the importance to various leaderships, I think that could be helpful to members, extension and clientele.
- View response In general, I think meeting before or after the WAEA meeting plus having a track inside the WAEA meetings works good for my travel and time as opposed to having a separate WEC meeting. Although, I'm not opposed to trying that sometime as well to see what kind of turnout we may have.
- View response I haven't traditionally attended the WAEA meetings, but I do enjoy WEC. But I've never attended the joint WEC/WAEA meetings. This year I just have too much other travel to consider going.
- View response I'm an early career professional so just learning what WEC is about.
- View response The WEC does excellent work and should continue to make efforts to engage young professionals. My extension position is not well supported to attend these meetings. The work of WEC is not on the radar of our administration.
- View response It's a great way to connect with colleagues from the west at relatively low cost. We need to think about how to be productive as in the past using technology, social media, etc. Some in our group are really good at it and others not, teachable moment!
